PORTILLO'S TO HIRE SEVERAL HUNDRED DRIVERS

The iconic restaurant brand is hiring to fuel new self-delivery program.

Oak Brook, Ill. – Portillo's, the fast-casual restaurant concept known for its menu of Chicago-style favorites, is launching its own self-delivery program. The chain will soon begin using its own drivers to deliver select orders that come through portillos.com or its app, bringing the true Portillo's experience to customer's doorsteps.

To fuel the new program, Portillo's plans to hire several delivery drivers for each of its 62 restaurants, accounting for hundreds of new jobs across the chain. In addition to base salary, drivers will be able to earn tips from their deliveries. Additionally, they will be cross-trained inside the restaurant. Drivers must be at least 18 years of age, have a vehicle, have a valid driver's license, and must be able to show proof of insurance.

Portillo's continues to find ways to differentiate the experience for guests who order from the brand's website and app. Diners who order directly from Portillo's have access to limited-time offers, the lowest prices, birthday club rewards and now the brand's own drivers.

Delivery has been one of the fast-growing arms of the Portillo's business, and the chain foresees continued growth in the delivery sphere. Portillo's is currently partnered with third-party delivery companies DoorDash and UberEats, and it will continue to use those platforms to serve fans as well.
